

$150K from IGT helped Raimondo-led group set record

By Katherine Gregg
The Providence Journal

PROVIDENCE — Records show that IGT donated $150,000 to the Democratic Governors Association in the last six months, while Rhode Island Gov. Gina Raimondo was leading the group as chairwoman and former IGT Chairman Donald Sweitzer was serving as treasurer.

The contributions came while the Raimondo administration was negotiating a 20-year, no-bid Lottery contract extension with IGT. Twin River, which has led opposition to the proposed contract extension, donated $100,000 to the Democratic Governors Association on Feb. 28.

The association said Tuesday that it had broken its previous fundraising record during the first six months of the year.

Among the highlights cited in the DGA statement:

"After a historic 2018 cycle, the DGA's expanding donor base fueled the new all-time high. The number of unique individual donors grew 22 percent and number of individual contributions grew by 47 percent compared to the same period in 2015. ... In addition, the DGA had a more than 28 percent growth in first time online donors, giving the organization an immediate return on its increased investment in its digital program."

"The DGA's record-breaking fundraising haul will help us build the infrastructure to win competitive gubernatorial races in 2019 and 2020," said DGA Executive Director Noam Lee.

Raimondo has not yet responded directly to inquiries on her role in the record-breaking six months, following her election as chairwoman of the association last December.

Raimondo

Sweitzer

The day she was elected by her fellow governors, she told The Journal: "It is primarily a fundraising job."

Raimondo's State House spokesman Josh Block referred The Journal to the Washington, D.C.-based DGA, where spokesman David Turner said:

"Gov. Raimondo and the DGA are seizing on the success of 2018 when we flipped 7 governorships from red to blue. Democratic governors now represent a majority of Americans, and that means more and more people are seeing the positive results of having a Democratic governor lead their states. Gov. Raimondo is an integral part of telling that story."

It was not immediately clear how many out-of-state trips Raimondo has taken to raise money for the DGA, since winning reelection as governor in November. Turner said Raimondo "has been transparent about when she is leaving the state on behalf of the DGA. She has previously announced four out-of-state overnight trips to Washington, D.C., Florida, California, and New York."

Travel advisories issued by her State House office staff make broad mention of DGA meetings or "fundraising during her out-of-state ventures, without further details. On Feb. 1, for example, her office reported she was headed to the National Governors Association's 2019 Winter Meeting in Washington, and while there would "attend political and fundraising events."

On April 2, Block advised the media: "Governor Raimondo is traveling to Florida this afternoon on DGA business and will return to Rhode Island tomorrow evening."

On April 30, he advised: "Governor Raimondo is traveling to San Francisco today on DGA business and will return to Rhode Island tomorrow night."

On May 9: "Governor Raimondo is traveling to New York City today to receive the National Mother's Day Committee's 'Outstanding Mother of the Year' award. She will remain in New York for the DGA Spring Policy Conference and will return to Rhode Island tomorrow afternoon." On July 19: "Governor Raimondo is traveling to Nantucket tomorrow to attend a DGA retreat and will return to Rhode Island Sunday afternoon." On July 25: "Governor Raimondo is traveling to New York City today to attend a roundtable discussion with New York tech executives hosted by Tech:NYC. She also has economic development meetings and DGA meetings while in New York. The Governor will return to Rhode Island tomorrow afternoon."

By midnight Wednesday, fundraising reports are due from both the DGA and Raimondo's own home state campaign account, which at last report had $639,199 left in the till as of March 31, after raising $398,297 and spending $64,689 during the first three months of the year.

Chamber: Business is good, but challenges remain

Middletown Director of Planning Ronald Wolanski, John Nunes, owner of Newport Vineyards, and state Rep. Deb Ruggiero talk business at Newport Vineyards in Middletown to kick off Small Business Week on May 7. (MONICA HERSHBERGER PHOTO/CONTRIBUTED BY THE NEWPORT COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE)

Daily News staff

NEWPORT — Community leaders visited 90 companies across Newport County, Bristol and Warren on May 7 to solicit feedback from business owners. Connect Greater Newport, the economic development division of the Newport County Chamber of Commerce, conducted the regional business walk. The following are key takeaways that the leaders heard:

- On a positive note, 92% of respondents reported that business was "good/steady or better."
- A point of concern: 62% of businesses that require trained employees said they face workforce challenges.
- Other challenges cited by respondents included infrastructure, regulations and permitting, and cost of doing business, such as high tax rates.

- Benefits of being located here are proximity to big cities and water, quality of life and clientele.
- Steps that can be taken to address businesses' needs include upgrading infrastructure (broadband internet, utilities and transportation options) and create training opportunities to retain business talent.
- "The business walk was an excellent example of our goals: collecting data and feedback from our existing businesses, identifying areas that are going well and where we can help to improve business climate, and acting as a resource to help business grow and expand," Erin Donovan-Boyle, the executive director of the chamber, said in a prepared statement. More information is available at connectgreaternewport.com/businesswalk.

Fundraiser planned to benefit Museum of Newport Irish History

Daily News staff

"Shamrocks & Seashells," the 10th Annual Benefit for the Museum of Newport Irish History's Interpretive Center, will be held Saturday, August 17 at 6 p.m. at Easton's Beach Rotunda Ballroom, 175 Memorial Boulevard. Traditional Irish music will be played by "The Exiles," featuring award-winning Irish step dancer, Kevin Doyle. Guests will also enjoy a bagpiper greeting, vintage carousel rides and an extensive silent auction. Tickets are $85 per person and are inclusive of hors d'oeuvres, a variety of food stations, complimentary wine and beer and dessert.

For more information and to reserve tickets, please visit the "Events" page on the Museum's website, NewportIrishHistory.org, or contact Maeve Sheehan at (401) 608-2065 or MaeveS@hotmail.com. All reservations will be held at the door; No tickets will be mailed. Reservations are requested by August 9.

The Museum's Interpretive Center is located at 648 Lower Thames Street, just south of Narragansett Avenue. 2018 Season hours are noon to 5 p.m., Thursday through Sunday, through Sunday, October 26.

Proceeds from "Shamrocks & Seashells" will fund Interpretive Center operating expenses and enhancements to Center displays. To learn more about the organization, to join, or to donate, please visit the Museum website, NewportIrishHistory.org.

Proceeds from "Shamrocks & Seashells" will fund Interpretive Center operating expenses and enhancements to Center displays. To learn more about the organization, to join, or to donate, please visit the Museum website, NewportIrishHistory.org.

The Museum of Newport Irish History Interpretive Center at 648 Thames St. (PROVIDENCE JOURNAL FILE PHOTO)

CHANGE

From Page A3

gravitated to the National Lampoon, edgier and daring.

I must admit I haven't bought a copy of Mad in decades. But I liked knowing it was still around.

ODDZNENDZ: RIP:

Debbie Trezvant

• Obituaries are seldom funny, though some are unintentionally entertaining. This one was surely intentional.

Mike Roarke, who played and coached in the Major Leagues, died this week at age 88. His daughter, Karen Roarke, lives in Middletown.

The first part of his obit said that if he had written

MAD, the long-running satirical magazine that influenced everyone from "Weird Al" Yankovic to the writers of "The Simpsons," will be leaving newsstands after its August 2019 issue. (ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE PHOTO)

it, it would read, "Mike died. Chrysler for sale." Excellent.

• I met Charlie Shea when he was maybe 14, playing guitar in the local rock band Bloody Knuckles, a dynamic outfit that lasted a couple of years.

Next time I saw Charlie he was 17 and playing at Billy Goode's. His skills blew me away. His improvement was pronounced. It was a time where you could hear a teenage Charlie and a 60-ish Paul Geremia on successive nights and be stunned by both.

Charlie moved to Nashville in 2014. He returned last weekend, playing the Newport Folk Festival with alt-country singer Rayland Baxter.

Mike and Robyn Shea must be ecstatic.

- R.I.P: Lynn Triplett.
- People either love or hate "Once Upon a Time ... In Hollywood."

Put me in the love category, one of Quentin Tarantino's best.

• Messing with Spring Street traffic patterns. Just what we don't need.

Jim Gillis is a Daily News columnist. Send him email at jimgillis13@gmail.com.

LITTLE COMPTON ANTIQUES FESTIVAL & CLASSIC AUTO SHOW
Saturday, August 3
10:00 am-4:00 pm
548 West Main Road, Little Compton
$12/person, Free for children under 12

$2 off admission w/ this ad!

Shop for Antiques
Admire Classic Cars
View an Exhibition

www.PreserveRI.org